humans are still evolving and we don't know what will - anatomically modern homo sapiens us are thought to have emerged as a distinct species around 200 000 years ago in africa while we often imagine one species of hominid handing the baton to the next in a neat linear evolution of man progression homo sapiens lived simultaneously with several other hominid species homo neanderthalensis homo floresiensis and the much older homo